TAG LINE: "If you can't find friends, make them."

SYNOPSIS:

Isolated genius Jesse Park programs retro video games, fronts a robot rock band, and wears a pink helmet at all times. Yeah. He's kind of an odd dude. When he invites adorkable introvert, Kim, to provide both the voice and brains for his current project (an emotionally capable artificial intelligence), they find that the more they delve into Kim's consciousness, the more they're drawn out of their self-imposed social exile.

More...

Galatea is a film that begins with a car wreck and ends with a ragtime jam session. In between is an unconventional tale of quirky girl meets misfit boy. Kim drops into Jesse's odd little world in an off-beat adventure of science, music, and the pursuit of companionship. A character study through and through, Galatea seeks to entertain through simple beats and thematic depth. You'll laugh with humans, you'll rock out with robots, and by the film's end you'll be left with plenty to ponder regarding love, loneliness, and human(?) connection.
